

Finis Henderson

Finis Henderson

Being part of Finis Henderson's audience is equivalent to being invited to a reunion of some of the entertainment industry's greatest legends and contemporary favorites. Sinatra, Boys II Men, Presley, Alan Jackson, Nat King Cole and daughter Natalie, Sammy Davis, Jr., and many others gather on stage for an evening of music, dancing, and comedy. As he weaves the comic personas of the Reverend Jesse Jackson, Rodney Dangerfield, and Mike Tyson through the crowd, one is apt to forget they're not watching a crazed chorus, but the versatile talent of one dynamic performer. The sound is theirs...the voice is pure Finis Henderson. But as the evening draws to a close, it isn't a legend that brings the audience to its feet, but the intensely melodic strains of Mr. Henderson's own rendition of Music Of The Night. There is something about Finis Henderson's performance that makes him stand out from every other musical impressionist in the business. His obvious passion for entertaining, combined with his elegant style and limitless talent, make him one of the most successful performers on the corporate circuit today. Reflecting a rare agility not generally seen since entertainment's golden era, Finis does it all, as a dynamic singer, comedian and dancer, he stands alone in this day of specialized show business. In addition to live club, casino, and corporate appearances, his television credits include Make Me Laugh, The Jackson Mini Series, Nashville Now, Comic Strip Live, Crazy Horse Saloon, and A Little Bit Strange. Films include Wired and I'm Gonna Get You Sucka! Finis Henderson is going places. The marvelous gift he has been given is now his gift to us...polished to perfection and heading for stardom!
